

THE ILLUSTRATED LONDON ALMANACK FOR 1887.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS OF 1886.

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF THE MEMBERS IN THE TWENTY-FOURTH PARLIAMENT OF THE UNITED KINGDOM, AND THE TWELFTH OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

The General Election of 1886 produced remarkably little change in the personnel of the House. While the election of 1885 introduced 333 new men to Parliament, that of 1886 introduced only 140, and of these a great many are old Parliamentary hands.

The terminal initial letters denote the political party to which each member belongs. The Irish National party are marked P.

In the above table members who were returned as Independents are classed as Liberals.

In 1832 the number of members of the Lower House was finally fixed at 688; but in 1844 Sudbury (two members) was disfranchised, and in 1852 St. Albans (two members) suffered the same fate. These four seats were, in 1861, allotted as follows:—Two to the West Riding of York, one to South Lancashire, and one to Birkenhead.

In 1867 the number of members of the House of Commons was again fixed at 658; but in 1870 Beverley (two members), Bridgewater (two members), Cashel, and Sligo were disfranchised, and these six seats were not re-allotted.

In 1885 the number of members of the Lower House was finally fixed at 670; England returning 465, Wales 30, Scotland 72, and Ireland 103 members. The previous distribution had been—England 459, Wales 30, Scotland 60, and Ireland 103 seats. There are now 377 county members, as against 283; 284 borough members, as against 360; and 9 University members, as against 9.

thirty-four members, contested. Mr. Sexton, it should be noted, was returned for two places—Belfast West and Sligo; and at present (time of going to press) sits for both, not being allowed by the rules of the House to choose which of the two he prefers, because of a petition having been presented from Belfast against his return.

RULES FOR THE ADMISSION OF STRANGERS TO THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Formerly members used to issue tickets for the Strangers' Gallery in wholesale fashion; and at times Inspector Denning has had to conduct a ballot for seats in which 500 persons have participated; but under the new regulations only as many tickets are issued for a given day as there are seats. A stranger desirous of attending a sitting of the House applies, by letter or personally, to a member of the House, signifying the day for which he desires the ticket of admission, and the gallery (Strangers' or Speaker's) in which he prefers to sit. There are sixty-five seats in the Strangers' and forty-two in the Speakers' Gallery. These tickets are obtained by the members from the authorities of the House, who have to be furnished by the member with the name and address of the applicant, which are entered in a book. Persons provided with tickets of admission to the Strangers' Gallery assemble in St. Stephen's Hall at a quarter to four o'clock on ordinary days, and at a quarter to twelve on Wednesdays, taking a seat on the benches running along the north side of the Hall. After prayers, these ticket-holders are conducted in batches by the police through the Central and Inner Lobbies into the Strangers' Gallery. Possessors of tickets for the Speaker's Gallery assemble at a quarter to four o'clock on the west side of the Central Lobby, next to the rails protecting the approach to the corridor leading to the Inner Lobby, and on these exhibiting their tickets to the policeman on duty, they are passed on into the Inner Lobby, whence they enter the gallery by a door to the east of the entrance to the House. On entering either the Speaker's or Strangers' Gallery, the ticket-holder has to enter his name and address in a book, which is compared with the name and address given by the M.P. issuing the ticket. Except in times when interest in the sittings is widespread, strangers who have failed to obtain tickets in the ordinary course may often obtain admittance to one or other of the galleries by sending on their card or a note to a member, from the Central Lobby. Ladies obtain tickets for the Ladies' Gallery by writing in the same way to a member, but they generally obtain admittance to the House by a door in the vicinity of the members' private entrance to the House, which is approached from Palace-yard.

Liberals 196
Dissentient Liberals 73
Conservatives 316
Parnellites 85

670

The Conservatives and Dissentient Liberals combined, numbering 389, have a majority of 108 over Liberals and Parnellites, who together number 251. The Liberals and Dissentient Liberals number 269, a minority of 49, as compared with the Conservatives. The Liberals, Dissentient Liberals, and Parnellites combined number 354, a majority of 38 over the Conservatives.

A careful analysis of the Election returns of 1886 shows the aggregate votes in the whole of the United Kingdom were:—

For Liberals ...	1,800,233
" Parnellites	374,763
" Conservatives	1,687,823
" Dissentient Liberals	440,520

Majority for Home Rule... 46,653

It will be seen from the above analysis that the total number of electors in favour of Home Rule is 2,174,996, that of electors against it 2,128,343—leaving a clear majority in its favour of close upon 50,000. It may be remarked, as confirming the general accuracy of these estimates, that the total number of electors thus accounted for is 4,303,339, which is almost exactly 75 per cent of the total electorate of Great Britain.

The changes effected by the Election of 1886 in Ireland, as compared with that of 1885, are scarcely worth consideration. The Unionists carried the whole of Londonderry and South Tyrone. The Nationalists, on the other hand, secured a seat in Belfast; and the popular idea of a Loyalist Ulster is a delusion, a corner of it having been torn from the Loyalists or Unionists. Nevertheless, every seat there was any chance of winning from the Parnellites was hotly contested. There were thirty-three seats, returning
