

Written by J. R. EASTWOOD.

Music by J. W. HINTON, M.A., Mus. D.

PIANO.

S.

Soave. <->

rall.

1. O fool-ish heart, thy joy may change to grief,— The bright-est day will dark-en, will
 2. O care-less heart, the cloudswill veil the sky, With swift ad - - - vance the p

dark-en, be-ing brief; In hap-py eyes un - hap-py tears may start;
 win-ter draw-eth nigh, And soon in gloom will glow-ing light de - part;

più f

The fair-est flower, un-fold-ing leaf by leaf, Must, in full blos-som, with its pe-tals
 The song may fal - ter with the wea-ry sigh; The throbs of an-guish with thy pul-ses

do. riten, e dim - in - u - en - do. Perdendosi. S.

part. O fool - ish heart, O fool - ish heart, O fool - ish, fool - ish heart!
start. O care-less heart, O care-less heart, O care-less, care-less heart!

dim e riten. S.

Repeat Symph.

LAST VERSE.

3. O hap-py heart, con - tent with passing joy, Charmed by the strains the minstrel birdsem -

f con abbandon.

- ploy; Where gold-en sun-beams thro' the branches dart, The brimming cha - lice eres. sempre.

is with-out al - loy, With-out the bit - ter - ness that years im - part. O hap - py poco dim - - in - - u - - en - - do. S.

heart, O hap - py heart, O hap-py, hap-py heart! Last time to end Symph. S.

dim. at fine. pp